THE NATIONALIZATION OF HEALTH

Dr. Little, medical health officer, in submitting his report to the ratepayers' meeting, said he had thought that legislation should be passed to provide for a hospital tax. This, he observed, would help out in cases of indigents.

Dr. Little's suggestions along the lines of nationalizing the health of the country. The establishing of municipal hospitals was the first in this direction.

It is a well-known fact that the father of the idea of municipal hospitals in this province, the Hon. A. G. McKay, was a believer in the value of the health of the country. Others have advocated the principle and even labor groups have championed the principle for years.

The nationalization of health, in its true sense, is only made possible by a system of taxation which compels everyone to contribute to the maintenance of hospitals.

Our school system has been nationalized, with the children of the nation, in that they are kept up by taxation.

Health is the most important thing in any nation and yet, as we pointed out in a recent issue of the Tribune, it is very often the last thing we think about when it comes to making intelligent provision for taxation.

If everyone was forced to pay a hospital tax throughout the Dominion, then in cities, towns, villages and districts, it would greatly simplify matters and do away with the criticism of hospital boards who are called upon to finance under well-defined laws, over a chaotic system of control.

If hospitalization rested upon an optional scheme of taxation it would mean that there should be no indigents, as people would be admitted to the hospital automatically.

Of course if anyone wanted special treatment and accommodations, extra would have to be paid for.

Under present conditions doctors are forced, in many cases, to render their services for nothing. If the health of the nation is nationalized, the medical men would be paid for their services. What doctor would be called upon to render his services who they receive no pay any more than a printer, carpenter, or any other tradesman who does his work for nothing?

Considerable advance has already been made in handling the sick in the country but we still have some distance to go before an absolute satisfactory system is worked out and this can only be obtained by the nationalizing of the health of the nation.

CHANGE NEEDED IN OUR ECONOMIC SYSTEM

The Tribune has contended—and still contends—that what is needed to bring the world back to normal is a change in our economic system to meet the changed conditions which have been imposed upon us irrevocably through the use of labor-saving machinery.

The Hanna Herald, published in the northern under the date of January 25, in dealing with the subject under the heading, "A Crisis of Civilization," says in part:

"If a farmer or a business man goes bankrupt, broke, down and out following a fixed routine in his methods, who does he do? Continue the same suicidal method, after tottering to his feet in a frenzied effort to arise?"

"If he has the slightest trace of common sense, he changes his method."

"With the world, if so we say, followed by humanity for three hundred years, who does he do? Continue the same suicidal method, after tottering to his feet in a frenzied effort to arise?"

"If he has the slightest trace of common sense, he changes his method."

"If out from this wreckage and chaos of capitalism, we have the friendly, neighborly system of human co-operation, the change will not have to be made."

Co-operation, as a child of our age, would offer a more substantial something than a chaotic business world.

"Let us get together while we may."

The situation is nicely summed up in The Herald's remarks. What is the use of continuing along the same old, same old, suicidal path with physical, financial and mental ruin?

The change has to be made and the sooner people understand this the better and the sooner will the system be changed for our economic life.

We join with The Hanna Herald in saying: "Let us get together while we may."

Along The Trail

ABRAHAM LINCOLN'S BIRTHDAY

On Monday, February 12, the birthday of Abraham Lincoln will be celebrated by the people of the Peace River. Several years ago, at that date, I visited the city of Springfield, Illinois.

Flags were flying from every point of vantage. I asked a man at the hotel what was the cause of the display of flags. He looked me up and said, "It is his birthday. 'Why this is Lincoln's Birthday.'"

During my ten-day stay in the city I learned what the man spoken of looked at me in astonishment.

Later in the day I wandered along the various streets and by talking to one first and another I discovered that the memory of the Great Emancipator was just as fresh in the minds of the people and was just as sincerely revered as it had been by an ancestor.

Now, Mr. Lincoln was not dead—he seemed a living personality there among his people.

Lincoln was born in Kentucky, but he was in Springfield that he rose to prominence in his profession and in the political life of the nation.

Here and there in the city were the most famous of the men of the life of the much-loved married president.

One of the stations a tablet set in the cement marks where Lincoln was born on the journey from his home returned alive.

On the following morning I asked the lady of the house where I had a room where Lincoln's office was.

It happened to be only a block away, so I lost no time in visiting the home which was the office of the president.

It was a two-story frame structure and in its day was no doubt one of the finest houses in the city. Here was the office of the president.

I remember it, one of the door leading to the office of the president, from lumber which was sawn out of logs grown on the old homestead in Indiana. Here was a relic of the many other articles prized by the family.

It was early, I happened to be the only visitor. I was shown into the office of the president, which was a fireplace, and as I stood there I tried to picture the president sitting there.

It was very often the last thing we think about when it comes to making intelligent provision for taxation.

General Homby Replies To Some Objections To New British Immigration

Some of the objections to new immigration, which are now being put forward by the farmers and by Labour, can be answered by examining the conditions which led to the existing unemployment and the need for new immigrants.

During the past four or five years, a serious curtailment of credit has resulted in an almost complete cessation of our national development. Unemployment has naturally followed the resulting curtailment of the purchasing and consuming power.

This ideal should be kept ever to the fore," he said. He complimented the board and then carried on during these difficult times.

H. W. Clarke, formerly in charge of the Prairie Land Office, said that there was one matter he wanted to mention and that was his regard to the delegation that went to Edmonton in connection with the moving of the office.

He said that the office had been charged with letting the town and district down, which was also a matter of the office in further industrial unemployment. And so the vicious circle has continued.

If the cause of the existing depression was the cessation of our development, it is surely to be expected that we should be again to develop our country. It is only by progressing that we can get out of the depression.

This is especially true of a new country such as this. Continuing to develop and progress if she is not to go back—that is to say, to a state of stagnation.

In the past, as long as she was developing, she was prosperous. She is in an unprosperous condition, as I think it is chiefly because she has ceased to develop.

I believe that she will be prosperous. The board should take heed of his help and development on the old lines.

The further development of our country is the first step to be taken in the direction of National recovery. It is only by progressing that we can get out of the depression.

Many Matters of Importance Discussed at Annual Meeting of the Local Board of Trade

The chairman had something to say on the removal of the Land Office. He thought the action of the government was hasty and a mistake.

Reference was made to the creamery now being constructed at Grande Prairie. He was the 400th consecutive game the University of Manitoba graduated.

Another matter touched upon was the spread of the pestilence in the town and district down, which was also a matter of the office in further industrial unemployment. And so the vicious circle has continued.

Hythe's Weekly News Basket

"When is the Peace River to get the Coast Outlets? We've waited twenty years. We need it NOW!"

PEACE OUTLET

Ottawa, Jan. 30. D. M. Kennedy, United Farmer member of the Peace River, has given notice of his hard personal resolution to construct the Peace River outlet to the Pacific Coast Railway. It has introduced in the House of Commons each session for years.

The above was published in the Edmonton Bulletin last week. Our slogan in the Hythe Weekly News Basket is to the effect that we have waited twenty years for this hardy perennial to get to mature growth. But it has been cut so often that it must be a Scotch thistle to fight and hang on to its roots so long.

OLD COUNCIL RE-ELECTED

The annual meeting of the town council was held on Monday evening, Feb. 6, with Mayor Clark in the chair.

Reports of the town's business were tabled and all all revenue and expenses were passed.

The old council was re-elected, and there were not any kinks about their work last year. Some of the statements showed quite an improvement.

Rackets have been supplied by the club and as the fee is less than the cost of a racket, it is expected there will be a large membership.

The Rex Theatre has been rented for the season and play is to start on Monday.

The game is now in Hythe, and nearly everyone is a learner, but much enthusiasm is being shown and it will not be long before there will be many good players.

TOO HARD ON ROAD

A train which travels so quickly that its high speed is still in advance of practical use is an anomaly, but nevertheless it is a reality. The "Flying Hamburger," and it is intended to note that thirty years ago speeds unequalled in the world were achieved by electric trains built by English electric companies. On September 15, 1903, a speed of 124.88 miles an hour was made, and this was increased on October 27 to 130.16 miles. Technical difficulties, especially connected with the coaches, were responsible for the fact that these trains were not put into regular service. There was also no popular demand at that time for such rapid travel. The record of 142.9 miles made by the "Zeppelin on rails" two years ago, still stands unchallenged as the world's record for travel on rails, but the speed is too high for practical use.

Garnet Pratt wondering what was the matter that "Maggie and Jack" in the game against King (they refused to go over the top line for some unknown reason). Jack Mantle in the same game inclined to be troubled with the same affliction (he was several times). Al King having lots of breaks—and all good ones. Alex Dalgleish in his game against O'Brien, going between two counters with only a quarter of an "in" instead of an "out" was placed between them. It was travelling (Alex says he just missed the boom that much). Rex A. Wright playing for Dalgleish, saying it couldn't be done again in a hundred times. "Red" Smith saying he was heavy when he should have been light and vice versa. McMillan declaring that when one's opponent sets a lead rock in the house it is looking to place more on the other side—it gives your opponent some trouble for him to take out a certain truth than poetry in that: Alex Wishart claiming he should have been an "in" instead of an "out".
